

Smithsonian Institution

National Anthropological Archives

Alice Cunningham Fletcher Papers- Omaha Allotment Outgoing Correspondence Box: 3, 1883-84

Extracted on Feb-07-2023 03:49:10

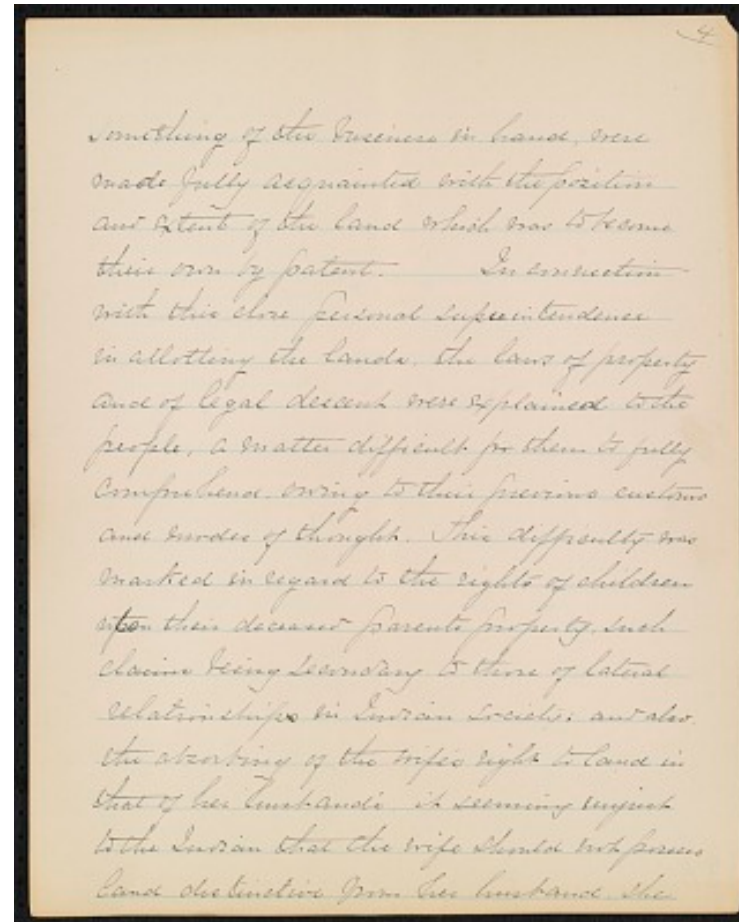

The Smithsonian Institution thanks all digital volunteers that transcribed and reviewed this material. Your work enriches Smithsonian collections, making them available to anyone with an interest in using them.

The Smithsonian Institution (the "Smithsonian") provides the content on this website (transcription.si.edu), other Smithsonian websites, and third-party sites on which it maintains a presence ("SI Websites") in support of its mission for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge." The Smithsonian invites visitors to use its online content for personal, educational and other non-commercial purposes. By using this website, you accept and agree to abide by the following terms.

- If sharing the material in personal and educational contexts, please cite the National Anthropological Archives as source of the content and the project title as provided at the top of the document. Include the accession number or collection name; when possible, link to the National Anthropological Archives website.
- If you wish to use this material in a for-profit publication, exhibition, or online project, please contact National Anthropological Archives or transcribe@si.edu

For more information on this project and related material, contact the National Anthropological Archives. See this project and other collections in the Smithsonian Transcription Center.

something of the business in hand, were made fully acquainted with the position and extent of the land which was to become their own by patent. In connection with this close personal superintendence in allotting the lands, the laws of property and of legal descent were explained to the people, a matter difficult for them to fully comprehend, owing to their previous customs and modes of thought. This difficulty was marked in regard to the rights of children to their deceased parents property, such claim being secondary to those of lateral relationships in Indian society; and also the absorbing of the wife's right to land in that of her husband's, it seeming unjust to the Indian that the wife should not possess land distinctive from her husband, she something of the business in hand, were made fully acquainted with the position and extent of the land which was to become their own by patent. In connection with this close personal superintendence in allotting the lands, the laws of property and of legal descent were explained to the people, a matter difficult for them to fully comprehend owing to their previous customs and modes of thought. This difficulty was marked in regard to the rights of children upon their deceased parents property, such claims being secondary to those of lateral relationships in Indian society; and also the absorbing of the wife's right to land in that of her husband's, it seeming unjust to the Indian that the wife should not possess land distinctive from her husband, she

Alice Cunningham Fletcher Papers- Omaha Allotment Outgoing
Correspondence Box: 3, 1883-84
Transcribed and Reviewed by Digital Volunteers
Extracted Feb-07-2023 03:49:10

Smithsonian Institution

National Anthropological Archives

The mission of the Smithsonian is the increase and diffusion of knowledge - shaping the future by preserving our heritage, discovering new knowledge, and sharing our resources with the world. Founded in 1846, the Smithsonian is the world's largest museum and research complex, consisting of 19 museums and galleries, the National Zoological Park, and nine research facilities. Become an active part of our mission through the Transcription Center. Together, we are discovering secrets hidden deep inside our collections that illuminate our history and our world.

Join us!

The Transcription Center: <https://transcription.si.edu>

On Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/SmithsonianTranscriptionCenter>

On Twitter: @TranscribeSI

Connect with the Smithsonian

Smithsonian Institution: www.si.edu

On Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/Smithsonian>

On Twitter: @smithsonian