Base Hospital 47.

A.P. D.909, A.E. 7.

October 26, 1918.

My dear Mamma,

Yesterday there was a letter from you written the day after I was wounded. You hadn't heard of it at the time, of course, ~~for~~ but you must have got the news a day or two later, for the captain cabled to you about it. There was a letter from Jordan, back at the squadron, with a lot of news in it. He also told me about my baggage, which had been sent back to a depot for storage. I haven't quite given it up yet.

Another pleasant surprise yesterday was the arrival of my uniform, ordered in Paris a month and a half ago. At that time the squadron had a three days' rest, and the captain, considering the fact that I had been working pretty hard and had been in France a year with no leave, gave me a pass for the three
