

Proceedings of the Board of Regents Meeting held on September 16, 1991

Extracted on Apr-19-2024 03:36:04

The Smithsonian Institution thanks all digital volunteers that transcribed and reviewed this material. Your work enriches Smithsonian collections, making them available to anyone with an interest in using them.

The Smithsonian Institution (the "Smithsonian") provides the content on this website (transcription.si.edu), other Smithsonian websites, and third-party sites on which it maintains a presence ("SI Websites") in support of its mission for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge." The Smithsonian invites visitors to use its online content for personal, educational and other non-commercial purposes. By using this website, you accept and agree to abide by the following terms.

- If sharing the material in personal and educational contexts, please cite the Smithsonian Institution Archives as source of the content and the project title as provided at the top of the document. Include the accession number or collection name; when possible, link to the Smithsonian Institution Archives website.
- If you wish to use this material in a for-profit publication, exhibition, or online project, please contact Smithsonian Institution Archives or transcribe@si.edu

For more information on this project and related material, contact the Smithsonian Institution Archives. See this project and other collections in the Smithsonian Transcription Center.

prominent collectors. The press was particularly helpful in helping to identify collectors in their regions and in promoting the project.

The outreach phase involved visiting regions which appeared to be rich in cultural resources. Over the last three months, collections were viewed in New York City, Houston, Gettysburg, Atlanta, Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, and Baltimore. More than 40 letters from 10 different states were received, and approximately 10 phone calls continue to come in each week from potential donors.

The Results

During the last three months the staff was able to identify nearly one hundred potential donors, who had in their possession, collectively, more than 15,000 objects of varying quality and historical significance. Of that group of potential donors, at least ten are ready, willing, and able to support a National African American Museum with gifts and loans of objects and cash contributions.

The respondents to the Smithsonian's queries fall into four categories; they are artists, collectors of art, collectors of Black memorabilia, and collectors of family history. The staff has recently created an artists registry which will contain recent biographical information and slides of artists of African descent as well as other artists whose subject matter relates to the Black experience. Smithsonian staff has solicited the assistance of private gallery owners, cultural arts administrators and individual artists in soliciting participation.

The collectors of visual art seem to have the most pivotal and comprehensive collections. These collectors include an Atlantan who principally collects African American folk art but who also has works of contemporary African American and African artists. He has in excess of 4,000 works and is interested in donating part of his collection to museums. Two collectors in Los Angeles each own more than 1,000 works by twentieth-century African American artists. Both have been active in the African American museum community, and both look forward to finding a home for their collections in stable, responsible institutions. These collections included works by Elizabeth Catlett, Richmond Barthe, Charles White, Herman Kofi Bailey, John Outterbridge, Houston Conwill, Rene Stout, Sam Gilliam, Thornton Dile [[Dial]], Mose Toliver [[Tolliver]], and many others. Other important collections of fine art were to be found in Texas, New York, and Atlanta.

The collecting of "Black Memorabilia" has become very popular over the past five years. There is an organization called the National Black Memorabilia Collector's Association which holds meetings throughout the country and publishes a magazine entitled Black Ethnic Collectables. The materials collected include: old newspapers and magazines with stories of blacks and or slaves; stereotypical toys, postcards, photographs, jewelry and utilitarian objects, signs, posters and advertising art. Two important collectors in Atlanta each have more than 1,000 items. This material also exists in the collections of major museums where it has been in storage for years because of the sensitive nature of the subject matter. Some museums were willing to negotiate long term loans of this material. Ironically, the major locale for collections of this type is the greater Washington, D.C. area prominent collectors. The press was particularly helpful in helping to identify collectors in their regions and in promoting the project.

The entireach phase involved visiting regions which appeared to be risk in cultural resources. Over the last three mostles, collections were visced in See Yerk City, Sources, Cortyphung, Arlanta, Los Augains, Pittalaugh, and Baltimark. Sees then 40 letters from 10 different status were received, and approximately 10 phone calls sources to sees in each week from peterstial

The Results

Daring the last three mouths the staff was able to identify easily emsurpting potential density, who had in their possession, collectively, more than 13.000 objects of varying quality and bistorical alguificance. Of that group of potential denote, or least ten are ready, adding, and able to support a Sational African American Masses with gifts and loans of objects and cash

The respondence to the Smithsonian's queries fall into four categories; they are arriate, collectors of art, collectors of black memorabilia, and collectors of family history. The staff has recently created an arriate registry which will centain recent biographical information and slides of arriates of african descent as well as other artists whose subject matter relates to the Black superiess. Smithsonian staff has solicited the emulsterce of grivate gallery owners, sultural arts edministrators and individual scribes in soliciting participation.

The collectors of visual art sees to have the most pivotal and ememprehensive collections. These collectors isolade as Atlentas who principally collects African American folk art bur who also has works of contemporary African American and African artists. He has in access of 4,000 works and is increased in densities part of this collection to museum. Two collectors in Les Augeles each own more than 1,000 works by beenight-contury African American artists. Both have been active in the African American museum semmently, and both look forward or finding a home far their collections in stable, respectable institutions. These collections isolated works by Elizabeth Caclett, Richesed Serthe, Charles White, Horman Eafl Selley, John Outcarbridge, Houses Cowell, News Blook, En Gillian, Thornton Dile, Mase Tellwar, and many others. Other important collections of fine art were to be fewed in Teams, New York, and Atlanta.

The collecting of "Black Reserabilia" has become very popular over the past five years. There is an organization called the National Klack Reserabilist Collector's Association which holds meetings throughout the country and publishes a magnetine critical Klack Ethnic Collectorhies. The materials collected include old memopapers and magnetine with stories of blacks and or allowed include old memopapers and selections in Allows a terrecopylical tays, postenzies, phetographs, jewelry and satisfactors is Allows as ach have more than 1,000 items. This material also collectors is Allows each have more than 1,000 items. This material also coints in the collections of major memora where is has been in storage for years because of the sensitive mature of the whiject action. Sees more as were willing to regatiate leng term leans of this material. Incomically, the major leads for collections of this type is the greater Hashington, D.C. area

Proceedings of the Board of Regents Meeting held on September 16, 1991 Transcribed and Reviewed by Digital Volunteers Extracted Apr-19-2024 03:36:04

The mission of the Smithsonian is the increase and diffusion of knowledge - shaping the future by preserving our heritage, discovering new knowledge, and sharing our resources with the world. Founded in 1846, the Smithsonian is the world's largest museum and research complex, consisting of 19 museums and galleries, the National Zoological Park, and nine research facilities. Become an active part of our mission through the Transcription Center. Together, we are discovering secrets hidden deep inside our collections that illuminate our history and our world.

Join us!

The Transcription Center: https://transcription.si.edu
On Facebook: https://www.facebook.com/SmithsonianTranscriptionCenter

On Twitter: @TranscribeSI

Connect with the Smithsonian Smithsonian Institution: www.si.edu

On Facebook: https://www.facebook.com/Smithsonian

On Twitter: @smithsonian