1. Mrs. Hart O. Berg was the first American woman to fly as a passenger in an airplane. She is shown here beside Wilbur Wright shortly before their takeoff at Auvers, France. Note how securely her hat is tied down. (Photo: SI#A43064B)

2. The first woman to fly as an airplane passenger in America was Mrs. Ralph Van Deman. She was a good friend of the Wright brothers' sister Katherine. (Photo: SI#77-717)

3. The front page of "The Detroit Free Press" for June 20, 1911, and following days ran headline coverage of women flying at the Detroit Air Meet. (Photo: Courtesy the Detroit Public Library)

4. Although today thousands of women make commercial airline flights daily throughout the world, the very first woman to fly on a scheduled airline was Mrs. L. A. Whitney in 1914. (Photo: Courtesy "The St. Petersburg Times")

5. Katherine Wright was a staunch supporter of her brothers' work. She and Wilbur pose for reporters before embarking on one of their European trips to demonstrate Wright aircraft. (Photo: SI#A42804G)

The mission of the Smithsonian is the increase and diffusion of knowledge - shaping the future by preserving our heritage, discovering new knowledge, and sharing our resources with the world. Founded in 1846, the Smithsonian is the world's largest museum and research complex, consisting of 19 museums and galleries, the National Zoological Park, and nine research facilities. Become an active part of our mission through the Transcription Center. Together, we are discovering secrets hidden deep inside our collections that illuminate our history and our world.
