Mexico City Nov. 11th 1904.

My dear Mr. Hyde: -

We reached here day before yesterday in a regular "Northeaster" and it has rained almost every hour since.

I have endeavored to write but our room is so cold that it is almost impossible to sit still. We both have colds and are glad that we are going to a warmer part of the country. We have finished packing and Mrs. Pepper is lying on the sofa with a heavy shawl over her while yours truly has an overcoat wrapped about him. The people in the city, both American and natives, claim that such a bad spell has
