

Smithsonian Institution

Archives of American Art

Celebrating 175: Artist File, Marisol, 1961-1965

Extracted on Mar-25-2023 06:41:23

The Smithsonian Institution thanks all digital volunteers that transcribed and reviewed this material. Your work enriches Smithsonian collections, making them available to anyone with an interest in using them.

The Smithsonian Institution (the "Smithsonian") provides the content on this website (transcription.si.edu), other Smithsonian websites, and third-party sites on which it maintains a presence ("SI Websites") in support of its mission for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge." The Smithsonian invites visitors to use its online content for personal, educational and other non-commercial purposes. By using this website, you accept and agree to abide by the following terms.

- If sharing the material in personal and educational contexts, please cite the Archives of American Art as source of the content and the project title as provided at the top of the document. Include the accession number or collection name; when possible, link to the Archives of American Art website.
- If you wish to use this material in a for-profit publication, exhibition, or online project, please contact Archives of American Art or transcribe@si.edu

For more information on this project and related material, contact the Archives of American Art. See this project and other collections in the Smithsonian Transcription Center.

REACTIONS TO ART
Continued

[[image]]

One of the newest additions to the Gallery's collections is this whimsical creation called "The Generals," showing George Washington, in rear, sharing the same horse with Napoleon. Acquired during the summer, it has not yet been seen by most local art viewers. Now standing in the center of the Gallery's new wing, the piece evokes a humorous reaction even from those who believe an art gallery is exclusively a place for serious thoughts. Created by 32-year-old, Paris-born Marisol Escobar, who now lives in New York, the figure has a build-in phonograph which plays a march.

[[image]]

It's not the technique of the artist that puzzles this viewer, but the strange "Da Bc 20" scrawled near the woman's left shoulder. Explanation is that the artist, German impressionist Ernst Ludwig Kirchner, painted on both sides of a canvas. After his death, when his paintings were auctioned, the other side of this "Portrait of a Woman" was considered more salable and the auctioneer's code number placed on the "back."

As if relaxing outdoors, a young gallery visitor takes in the "Sunrise" by American sculptor David Hare. This rock at the base represents the earth, the vertical wires the sun's rays.

28 BUFFALO COURIER-EXPRESS, OCTOBER 21, 1962

Celebrating 175: Artist File, Marisol, 1961-1965
Transcribed and Reviewed by Digital Volunteers
Extracted Mar-25-2023 06:41:23

Smithsonian Institution

Archives of American Art

The mission of the Smithsonian is the increase and diffusion of knowledge - shaping the future by preserving our heritage, discovering new knowledge, and sharing our resources with the world. Founded in 1846, the Smithsonian is the world's largest museum and research complex, consisting of 19 museums and galleries, the National Zoological Park, and nine research facilities. Become an active part of our mission through the Transcription Center. Together, we are discovering secrets hidden deep inside our collections that illuminate our history and our world.

Join us!

The Transcription Center: <https://transcription.si.edu>

On Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/SmithsonianTranscriptionCenter>

On Twitter: @TranscribeSI

Connect with the Smithsonian

Smithsonian Institution: www.si.edu

On Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/Smithsonian>

On Twitter: @smithsonian