

Smithsonian Institution

National Anthropological Archives

Report to the Superintendent of the United States Coast Survey upon Ancient Tumuli in East Florida 1875

Extracted on Mar-29-2024 07:24:02

The Smithsonian Institution thanks all digital volunteers that transcribed and reviewed this material. Your work enriches Smithsonian collections, making them available to anyone with an interest in using them.

The Smithsonian Institution (the "Smithsonian") provides the content on this website (transcription.si.edu), other Smithsonian websites, and third-party sites on which it maintains a presence ("SI Websites") in support of its mission for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge." The Smithsonian invites visitors to use its online content for personal, educational and other non-commercial purposes. By using this website, you accept and agree to abide by the following terms.

- If sharing the material in personal and educational contexts, please cite the National Anthropological Archives as source of the content and the project title as provided at the top of the document. Include the accession number or collection name; when possible, link to the National Anthropological Archives website.
- If you wish to use this material in a for-profit publication, exhibition, or online project, please contact National Anthropological Archives or transcribe@si.edu

For more information on this project and related material, contact the National Anthropological Archives. See this project and other collections in the Smithsonian Transcription Center.

45.

being driven away, after a disastrous conflict. It is hardly worth while to consider the brief visit of Añasco in 1538, as he barely touched upon the coast, and returned at once to report to his chief. The treasure ship of 1545 came from New Mexico, and if there were any moneys on board, they would naturally have been of the viceroy of Mexico and, as we are told that the vessel and cargo were lost, it is to be supposed that the treasures were included. The same may be said of the plate fleet wrecked in 1552. Of the unfortunate experience of the Franciscan monks in 1549 little notice may be taken, as all who attempted to communicate with the Indians were killed.

Strictly speaking we can only determine with absolute certainty the date previous to which the coins of Charles V could not have been brought to Florida. It is true that they may have been carried in the ships of the old cavalier De Leon being driven away, after a disastrous conflict. It is hardly worth while to consider the brief visit of Añasco in 1538, as he barely touched upon the coast, and returned at once to report to his chief. The treasure ship of 1545 came from New Mexico, and if there were any moneys on board they would naturally have been of the viceroy of Mexico and, as we are told that the vessel and cargo were lost, it is to be supposed that the treasures were included. The same may be said of the plate fleet wrecked in 1552. Of the unfortunate experience of the Franciscan monks in 1549 little notice may be taken, as all who attempted to communicate with the Indians were killed.

45.

Strictly speaking we can only determine with absolute certainty the date previous to which the coins of Charles V could not have been brought to Florida. It is true that they may have been carried in the ships of the old cavalier De Leon

Report to the Superintendent of the United States Coast Survey upon Ancient Tumuli in East Florida 1875
Transcribed and Reviewed by Digital Volunteers
Extracted Mar-29-2024 07:24:02

Smithsonian Institution

National Anthropological Archives

The mission of the Smithsonian is the increase and diffusion of knowledge - shaping the future by preserving our heritage, discovering new knowledge, and sharing our resources with the world. Founded in 1846, the Smithsonian is the world's largest museum and research complex, consisting of 19 museums and galleries, the National Zoological Park, and nine research facilities. Become an active part of our mission through the Transcription Center. Together, we are discovering secrets hidden deep inside our collections that illuminate our history and our world.

Join us!

The Transcription Center: <https://transcription.si.edu>

On Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/SmithsonianTranscriptionCenter>

On Twitter: @TranscribeSI

Connect with the Smithsonian

Smithsonian Institution: www.si.edu

On Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/Smithsonian>

On Twitter: @smithsonian