Smithsonian Institution
Archives of American Art

Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney diary

Extracted on Mar-29-2024 05:10:21

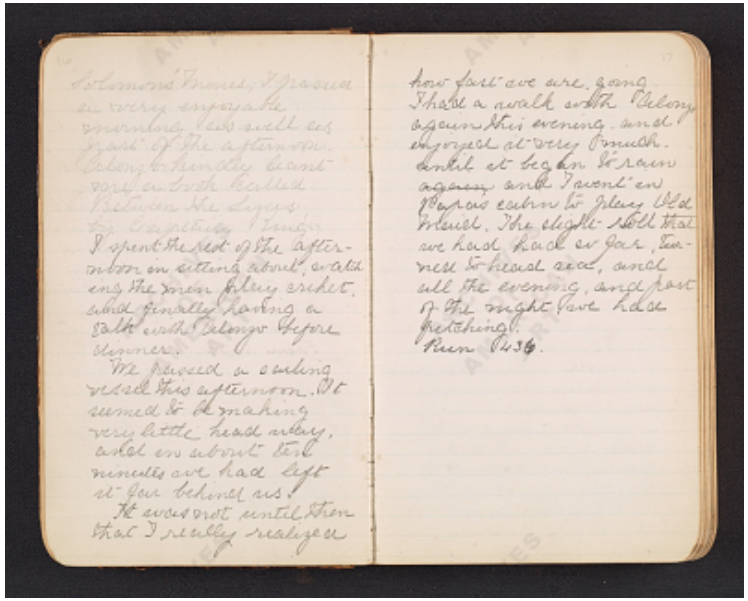

The Smithsonian Institution thanks all digital volunteers that transcribed and reviewed this material. Your work enriches Smithsonian collections, making them available to anyone with an interest in using them.

The Smithsonian Institution (the "Smithsonian") provides the content on this website (transcription.si.edu), other Smithsonian websites, and third-party sites on which it maintains a presence ("SI Websites") in support of its mission for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge." The Smithsonian invites visitors to use its online content for personal, educational and other non-commercial purposes. By using this website, you accept and agree to abide by the following terms.

- If sharing the material in personal and educational contexts, please cite the Archives of American Art as source of the content and the project title as provided at the top of the document. Include the accession number or collection name; when possible, link to the Archives of American Art website.
- If you wish to use this material in a for-profit publication, exhibition, or online project, please contact Archives of American Art or transcribe@si.edu

For more information on this project and related material, contact the Archives of American Art. See this project and other collections in the Smithsonian Transcription Center.

16
Solomon's Mines, I passed a very enjoyable morning as well as part of the afternoon. Alonzo kindly leant me a book called Between the Lines by Captain King.
I spent the rest of the afternoon in sitting about, watching the men play criket, and finally having a talk with Alonzo before dinner.
We passed a sailing vessel this afternoon. It seemed to be making very little head way, and in about ten minutes we had left it far behind us.
It was not until then that I really realized
[[end page]]
[[start page]]
17
how fast we are going.
I had a walk with Alonzo again this evening, and enjoyed it very much,until it began to rain [[strikethrough]] again [[/strikethrough]] and I went in Papa's cabin to play Old Maid. The slight roll that we had had so far, turned to head sea, and all the evening, and part of the night we had pitching.
Run 436.

Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney diary
Transcribed and Reviewed by Digital Volunteers
Approved by Smithsonian Staff
Extracted Mar-29-2024 05:10:21

The mission of the Smithsonian is the increase and diffusion of knowledge - shaping the future by preserving our heritage, discovering new knowledge, and sharing our resources with the world. Founded in 1846, the Smithsonian is the world's largest museum and research complex, consisting of 19 museums and galleries, the National Zoological Park, and nine research facilities.Become an active part of our mission through the Transcription Center. Together, we are discovering secrets hidden deep inside our collections that illuminate our history and our world.

Join us!
The Transcription Center: https://transcription.si.edu
On Facebook: https://www.facebook.com/SmithsonianTranscriptionCenter
On Twitter: @TranscribeSI

Connect with the Smithsonian
Smithsonian Institution: www.si.edu
On Facebook: https://www.facebook.com/Smithsonian
On Twitter: @smithsonian