

Smithsonian Institution

National Museum of the American Indian Archives Center

Thomas Henry Tibbles papers - George Crook: Letters and Clippings, 1879, 1882

Extracted on Apr-18-2024 08:04:37

The Smithsonian Institution thanks all digital volunteers that transcribed and reviewed this material. Your work enriches Smithsonian collections, making them available to anyone with an interest in using them.

The Smithsonian Institution (the "Smithsonian") provides the content on this website (transcription.si.edu), other Smithsonian websites, and third-party sites on which it maintains a presence ("SI Websites") in support of its mission for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge." The Smithsonian invites visitors to use its online content for personal, educational and other non-commercial purposes. By using this website, you accept and agree to abide by the following terms.

- If sharing the material in personal and educational contexts, please cite the National Museum of the American Indian Archives Center as source of the content and the project title as provided at the top of the document. Include the accession number or collection name; when possible, link to the National Museum of the American Indian Archives Center website.
- If you wish to use this material in a for-profit publication, exhibition, or online project, please contact National Museum of the American Indian Archives Center or transcribe@si.edu

For more information on this project and related material, contact the National Museum of the American Indian Archives Center. See this project and other collections in the Smithsonian Transcription Center.

Hayt's Assault on Gen. Crook-Concocting Another Indian War.

From the Omaha Herald of September 11th.

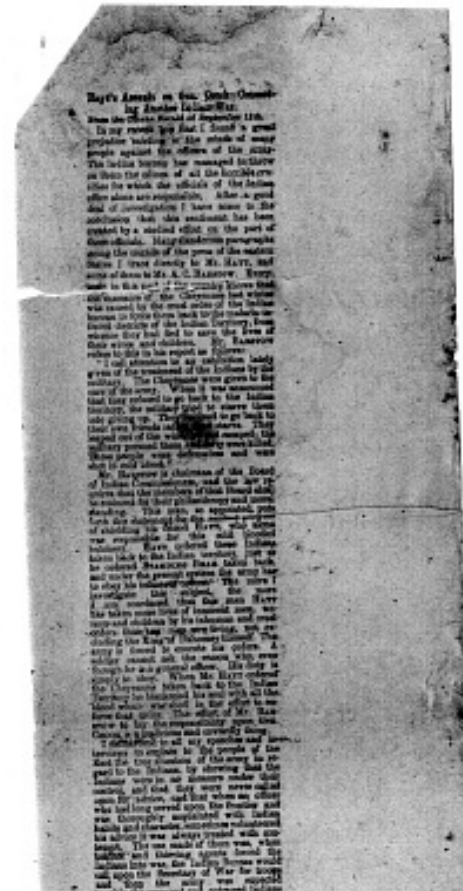

In my recent trip East I found a great prejudice existing in the minds of many people against the officers of the army. The Indian bureau has managed to throw on them the odium of all the horrible cruelties for which the officials of the Indian office alone are responsible. After a good deal of investigation I have come to the conclusion that this sentiment has been created by a studied effort on the part of these officials. Many slanderous paragraphs going the rounds of the press of the eastern States I trace directly to Mr. Hayt, and some of them to Mr. A.C. Barstow. Everybody in this part of the country knows that the massacre of the Cheyennes last winter was caused by the cruel order of the Indian bureau to force them back to malaria-infested districts of the Indian Territory, from whence they had fled to save the lives of their wives and children. Mr. Barstow refers to this in his report as follows:

"I call attention to an exhibition lately given the treatment if the Indians by the military. The Cheyennes were given to the care of the army. When it was announced that they refused to go back to the Indian territory, the military tried to starve them into giving up. They resolved to go back to their own friends rather than starve. They leapt out of the win [black oval smudge] d escaped; the military pursued then a [more of the same black oval smudge] rty were killed. These people were defenseless and were shot in cold blood."

Mr. Barstow is chairman of the Board of Indian Commissioners, and the law requires that the members of that Board shall be eminent for their philanthropy and moral standing. This man, so appointed, puts forth this statement for the evident [word lost in crease of paper] of shielding his friend Hayt, who alone was responsible for this cold blooded butchery. Hayt ordered these Indians taken back to the Indian territory, just as he ordered STANDING BEAR taken back, and under the present system the order has to obey his infamous orders. The more I investigate this subject, the more I am convinced that this man Hayt has taken more lives of innocent men, woman and children by his inhuman and cruel orders than any man now living, not excluding the King of Dahomey himself. The army is forced to execute his orders. A soldier cannot ask the reason why, even though he a general officer. His duty is simply to obey. When Mr. Hayt ordered the Cheyennes taken back to the Indian Territory he blackened his soul with all the blood that was shed in the effort to enforce that order. The effort of Mr. Barstow to lay the responsibility upon Gen. Crook is a malicious and cowardly thing.

I endeavored in all my speeches and interviews to explain to the people of the East the true situation of the army in regard to the Indians, by showing that the Indians were in no measure under their control, and that they were never called on for advice, and that when an officer who had long served upon the frontier and was thoroughly acquainted with Indian habits and character, sometimes volunteered his advice it was always treated with contempt. The use made of them was, when the traders and thieving agents forced the Indians into war, the Indian Bureau would call upon the Secretary of War for troops and then the army was expected [cut of by angle of page] Indians

[[end of page]]

Thomas Henry Tibbles papers - George Crook: Letters and Clippings, 1879, 1882
Transcribed and Reviewed by Digital Volunteers
Extracted Apr-18-2024 08:04:37

Smithsonian Institution

National Museum of the American Indian Archives Center

The mission of the Smithsonian is the increase and diffusion of knowledge - shaping the future by preserving our heritage, discovering new knowledge, and sharing our resources with the world. Founded in 1846, the Smithsonian is the world's largest museum and research complex, consisting of 19 museums and galleries, the National Zoological Park, and nine research facilities. Become an active part of our mission through the Transcription Center. Together, we are discovering secrets hidden deep inside our collections that illuminate our history and our world.

Join us!

The Transcription Center: <https://transcription.si.edu>

On Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/SmithsonianTranscriptionCenter>

On Twitter: @TranscribeSI

Connect with the Smithsonian

Smithsonian Institution: www.si.edu

On Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/Smithsonian>

On Twitter: @smithsonian