

Smithsonian Institution

Anacostia Community Museum Archives

Armstrong Manual Training School Yearbook, 1902-1903

Extracted on Apr-23-2024 06:15:44

The Smithsonian Institution thanks all digital volunteers that transcribed and reviewed this material. Your work enriches Smithsonian collections, making them available to anyone with an interest in using them.

The Smithsonian Institution (the "Smithsonian") provides the content on this website (transcription.si.edu), other Smithsonian websites, and third-party sites on which it maintains a presence ("SI Websites") in support of its mission for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge." The Smithsonian invites visitors to use its online content for personal, educational and other non-commercial purposes. By using this website, you accept and agree to abide by the following terms.

- If sharing the material in personal and educational contexts, please cite the Anacostia Community Museum Archives as source of the content and the project title as provided at the top of the document. Include the accession number or collection name; when possible, link to the Anacostia Community Museum Archives website.
- If you wish to use this material in a for-profit publication, exhibition, or online project, please contact Anacostia Community Museum Archives or transcribe@si.edu

For more information on this project and related material, contact the Anacostia Community Museum Archives. See this project and other collections in the Smithsonian Transcription Center.

[[image - black and white photograph]]

JAMES C. WRIGHT.

TEACHER OF TYPEWRITING AND SECRETARY OF SCHOOL.

BUSINESS COURSE.

This course is designed to fit one for general and special work in all lines of business endeavor. It gives training in the arts of business and seeks to create a commercial, enterprising spirit.

An inquiry into the status of the graduates of this department finds nearly all of them traders, insurance and real estate agents, government clerks, lawyers and doctors, and none idle.

TYPEWRITING.

THE END OF ALL EDUCATION IS RIGHT LIVING.

[[line]]

This department is equipped with twenty-eight machines embracing several standard makes. Beginning with the mechanism and proper care of the typewriter, the pupil is taught the correct fingering of the keyboard. Upon acquiring the fundamental principles involved in plain writing, practice is given in copying, letter writing, tabulating and designing, writing various business and legal forms, manifolding, mimeographing, stenographic transcription, and speed writing.

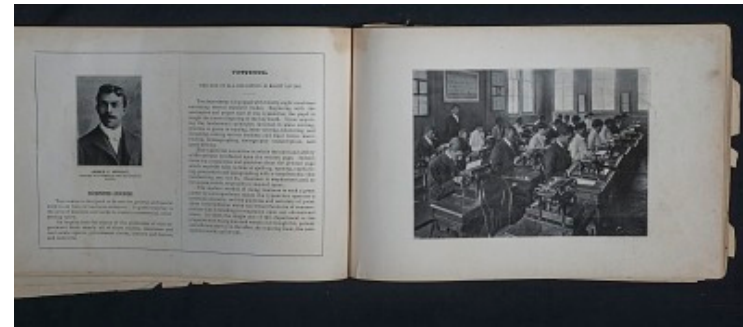

The typewriter is a mirror in which the skill and ability of the operator is reflected upon the written page. Indeed, there is a compactness and precision about the printed page which explodes false notions of spelling, spacing, capitalizing, punctuation and paragraphing with a completeness that handwriting can not do. Neatness is emphasized; and, as far as practicable, originality is insisted upon.

The modern method of doing business to such a great extent by correspondence makes the typewriter operator a potential necessity; and the plainness and certainty of print alone is the Gibraltar which can breast the storm of commercialism that is breaking in vengeance upon our educational shore. In short, the single aim of this department is the preparation of young men and women for thoughtful, patient and efficient service in the office, the counting room, the commercial world, and in life.

[[end page]]

[[start page]]

[[image - black and white photograph of students in typewriting class]]

Armstrong Manual Training School Yearbook, 1902-1903
Transcribed and Reviewed by Digital Volunteers
Approved by Smithsonian Staff
Extracted Apr-23-2024 06:15:44

Smithsonian Institution

Anacostia Community Museum Archives

The mission of the Smithsonian is the increase and diffusion of knowledge - shaping the future by preserving our heritage, discovering new knowledge, and sharing our resources with the world. Founded in 1846, the Smithsonian is the world's largest museum and research complex, consisting of 19 museums and galleries, the National Zoological Park, and nine research facilities. Become an active part of our mission through the Transcription Center. Together, we are discovering secrets hidden deep inside our collections that illuminate our history and our world.

Join us!

The Transcription Center: <https://transcription.si.edu>

On Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/SmithsonianTranscriptionCenter>

On Twitter: @TranscribeSI

Connect with the Smithsonian

Smithsonian Institution: www.si.edu

On Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/Smithsonian>

On Twitter: @smithsonian