EXPEDITIONS

Florida. Through the generosity of the Museum's Secretary, Mr. Seward, an archaeological expedition was made possible to the vicinity of Punta Gorda, on the west coast, under charge of Mr. Charles O. Turbyfill. In all, fourteen mounds were investigated but with meager results; the few shell implements and potsherds that were recovered, however, showing an ancient culture.

Near Fort Lauderdale, on the east coast, Mr. William C. Orchard made several excavations and unearthed a number of burials, but without any accompaniments. A banner stone and a stone gorget were recovered, besides
